Anderson, too, responded to the challenge. "This was my best race ever. I shaved five minutes off my personal best," he said. "This was a great confidence boost for me to sign up as a full-time athlete next year. I hope I become as much of an institution here as this race."

Hundreds of fans lined the finishing chute to welcome home the top three, followed by Australian Craig McKenzie and the UK's Stephen Bayliss. Defending champion Jason Shortis said he was disappointed he couldn't match last year's winning effort, but he struggled to make up lost time from the bike leg where he served a stint in the penalty box for drafting.

Women's winner Charlotte Paul was rewarded for her domination of the 42.2km run, crossing the finish line in 9:00:55—a course record.

"I could see Gina Ferguson coming, and that was scary," Paul said. "At one point
